

Popular Music Discourses

Tuesday 3 May, KuFo hosts a symposium on how we speak about popular music, and how popular music speaks to us. Even though pop and other forms of popular music form a central part of contemporary culture, they are seldom approached critically the way literature, film, theatre and other cultural discourses regularly are. Even so, popular music can tell us a great deal – about aesthetics and politics, about our view of men and women, about music as art and as commodity.

Welcome to an afternoon of music, film, and talk, talk, talk about sex and drugs and rock'n'roll and other wild things.

The symposium Popular Music Discourses will be held in English in Fryxellsalen, Tuesday 3 Maj, 13.15-17.00.
